ABSTRACT

Data on 1985 costs for tuition, fees, room and board at 397 state colleges and universities are presented. The institutions are members of the American Association of State Colleges and Universities (AASCU) or the National Association of State Universities and Land Grant Colleges (NASULGC). Trends in charges are reported for the entire group of schools and for specific institutions. For resident and nonresident students, comparative data for 1984 and 1985 are provided for: average undergraduate charges; average room and board costs; and average charges for graduate students and students in first professional schools of law, medicine, dentistry, and veterinary medicine. A narrative summary of trends includes the following findings: in-state undergraduate students faced an average of $3,621 in tuition, fee, room and board costs in fall 1985, compared to $5,553 for out-of state undergraduates; tuition and fees for in-state undergraduates increased by 8%, compared to an 11% increase for out-of-state students; Texas recorded the largest student-charge hike (over 40%), while Oklahoma was the only state registering a decrease in student charges; in-state graduate students experienced a 7% increase in tuition and fees, while nonresident students faced a 10% increase. PREFACE

December 19, 1985

Student Charges at Public Institutions: Annual Survey, 1985-1986 is a joint project of the American Association of State Colleges and Universities (AASCU) and the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges (NASULGC). These organizations represent 90 percent of the nation's publicly supported, four-year institutions of higher education.

AASCU and NASULGC collaborated on this report in 1985 to give higher education consumers easy access to up-to-date, accurate, and complete information about cost trends for tuition, fees, room, and board at their member campuses.

More than 360 colleges and universities, enrolling 2.5-million students, are AASCU members. Currently, 62 percent of AASCU institutions are comprehensive universities; 27 percent are general baccalaureate institutions with primary emphasis on undergraduate education; and 5 percent are doctorate-level institutions. AASCU members grant more than a quarter million bachelor's degrees annually--approximately 31 percent of the nation's total--about 27 percent of the master's degrees awarded each year, and 5 percent of the doctoral degrees.

NASULGC, the nation's oldest higher education organization, represents 149 public research universities. NASULGC member campuses enrolled 2.2 million students--or more than 30 percent of the nation's college students--during the 1984-85 academic year. Among these institutions are twenty-four of the largest colleges, universities, and multicampus systems of higher education in the country. NASULGC members award nearly half of all higher education degrees, including 36 percent of all bachelor's, 39 percent of all first professional, 44 percent of all master's, and 65 percent of all doctoral degrees.

Charges assessed students attending public colleges and universities are held--as a matter of general policy--as low as possible to encourage wide access to quality higher education. Each year, governors, state legislators, educators, and the public wrestle with a broad range of economic pressures and competing claims for public dollars in a continuing struggle to maintain low tuition. Over the past few years, various states have increased their higher education budgets, trimming tuition and fee hikes.

In 1985, public institutions in some states were able to hold the line on costs, while others were forced to boost student charges by hefty percentages. Consequently, student charges climbed again in 1985--but at a slower pace than last year's.

This report details trends in student charges--separately and combined--for AASCU and NASULGC member campuses. Appendices include cost information for specific colleges and universities. The report covers several important issues, including two-year comparisons of average undergraduate charges; average room and board costs; average charges for graduate students and students in first professional schools of law, medicine, dentistry, and veterinary medicine. The report also offers some important perspectives in pinpointing tuition trends and in making comparisons between higher education costs and general price trends throughout the economy.

Both associations hope this report will be useful to consumers of higher education, the public, the college and university community, and others in understanding an important part of higher education economics.

1985 STUDENT CHARGES AT PUBLICLY SUPPORTED COLLEGES AND UNIVERSITIES

FINDINGS

Tuition, fee, room, and board expenses climbed an average 6 percent in the fall of 1985 for in-state, undergraduate students attending over 500 campuses holding membership in the American Association of State Colleges and Universities (AASCU) and the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges (NASULGC).

Tuition and fees for in-state undergraduates averaged $1,278 in the fall of 1985--an 8-percent boost, compared with $1,188 the previous year.

Average room and board charges were $2,343 in the fall of 1985--a 5-percent increase over the $2,242 average for 1984.

Consequently, undergraduate students enrolling in public colleges or universities located in their state of residence faced an average of $3,621 in tuition, fee, room, and board costs in the fall of 1985, compared with $3,430 in 1984.

The 1985 survey of student charges is a new cooperative effort carried out by AASCU and NASULGC. The two associations' membership--more than 360 AASCU and 149 NASULGC campuses--represent 90 percent of publicly supported, four-year institutions of higher education in the United States.

Tuition and fees for in-state undergraduates at AASCU campuses posted an 8-percent average increase, compared with a 7-percent boost in the last previous survey. NASULGC-member colleges and universities registered a 7-percent hike for in-state undergraduate students, compared with a 10-percent increase in median charges reported in the last canvass.

Hawaii, Nevada, Guam, and the District of Columbia reported no student-charge increases for resident and nonresident undergraduates in 1985-86. Texas recorded the largest student-charge hike: over 40 percent. Oklahoma was the only state registering a decrease in student charges.

Tuition and fees for nonresident undergraduate students climbed to an average $3,210 in the fall of 1985, an 11-percent boost from the fall 1984 tally of $2,895. When room and board costs are factored into the higher education cost equation, these students faced an average of $5,553 in expenses.

Tuition and fees for in-state graduate students were $1,427 on the average in the fall of 1985, a 7-percent increase from $1,337 in 1984. Nonresident graduate students faced $3,199 in tuition and fees on the average in the fall of 1985--a 10-percent hike, compared with $2,902 in the previous reporting period.

Average tuition and fees for in-state, first professional students in the fall of 1985 were as follows: law, $2,063; medicine, $4,444; veterinary medicine, $3,264; and dentistry, $4,583. These figures represent 7-percent to 12-percent tuition and fee increases, compared with those of the previous reporting period.

*The average charges for medicine and veterinary medicine were calculated separately for resident and nonresident students because some institutions offer these programs only to state residents.

NOTE: Although undergraduate charges are higher in general at individual NASULGC member institutions, the rate of increase for these charges is lower than last year's and lower than the rate of increase in 1985 for AASCU campuses. For both associations, room and board charges increased at a lower rate in 1985, compared with 1984, and graduate charges increased at the same or lower rates than last year.

BACKGROUND: TUITION TRENDS

The rate of increase for student charges--tuition, fees, room, and board--at public colleges and universities in 1985 again outstripped economy-wide price increases for consumer goods and services.

The Consumer Price Index (CPI), a broad gauge of price inflation, climbed 3.9 percent in fiscal 1984, while student charges at public colleges and universities posted an average 8-percent increase.

Higher education economists have explained this phenomenon of outpacing by pointing to an essential difference in the costs of the goods and services purchased by colleges and universities, as compared with those acquired by the typical consumer. A special Higher Education Price Index (HEPI), which measures the change in costs of these goods and services, has been about 2-3 percentage points above the CPI for a few years.

Public college and university administrators report that tuition and fee increases are being allocated to:

- o Additional student financial aid
- o Raises in faculty salaries
- o Purchases of new equipment, especially for information services
- o Establishment of new academic programs.

Respondents to the 1985 student charges survey indicated that tuition and fee increases were necessary because of inflation and the inadequacy of state funding. Legislative mandates were cited most frequently by respondents as the reason for tuition boosts.

Despite hikes in the cost of higher education, public opinion surveys reveal that Americans are placing increasing value on advanced learning. The College Board reported in 1985 that 64 percent of those polled considered a college education to be "very important" and 27 percent thought it to be "fairly important"--a 91 percent composite tally. This contrasts with a 1978 survey indicating that only 36 percent found a college education to be "very important" and 46 percent believed it to be "fairly important," according to a September 4, 1985 report in the Chronicle of Higher Education.

State legislature debates have been waged over issues pertaining to access to public higher education and the responsibility for setting tuition rates. Some officials support unilateral establishment of tuition rates, ensuring cost consistency and equity across all state institutions. Others favor turning over to individual institutions the responsibility for setting tuition rates, a move that would allow key financial decisions to be more tailored to the characteristics of specific colleges and universities.

In a few cases, public colleges and universities have worked with state legislatures to set up unique tuition remission programs. These creative collaborations are motivated by concerns that increased charges--to cover increased costs--will be a factor in student selection. Institutions have tried waiving all or part of the standard student charges for unique groups of students, for example, out-of-state students.

State appropriations to public colleges and universities have been boosted an average of 19 percent during the past two years, indicating widespread state legislature support for higher education. However, these funding hikes have not prevented the need for tuition and fee boosts in most cases. For example, many funding-increase packages contain provisions earmarking new appropriations to special projects geared to improving state and regional economies.

Table VII provides a breakdown of tuition and fee trends on a state-by-state basis.The data for AASCU and NASULGC institutions were combined, overall averages were obtained, and these were compared to determine the percentage change from 1984 to 1985.

METHODOLOGY

Data Collection

The 1985 Survey of Student Charges was mailed to individual AASCU and NASULGC members early in September 1985. Included in the questionnaire was a request for tuition data for first professional schools and a series of additional questions to gather information about varying rates for program of study, alternative offerings of room and board, and reasons for tuition and fee increases. Surveys contained 1984 data and requested that respondents make appropriate corrections to ensure accurate 1984-85 student-charges comparisons.

In some cases, discrepancies resulted from the use of different credit-hour bases for calculations, but most of them were eliminated in the editing process. Responses were sorted and surveys containing questionable data were checked via telephone calls to respondents.

Charges shown in this study may vary from actual fees paid by students because many colleges and universities offer various course-load alternatives and room and board plans. Figures used in the study represent typical student costs at each institution.

Data Analysis

The student-charges database contains 397 respondents for 1985, of which 296 are AASCU members, 93 are NASULGC members, and eight are members of both associations. (These are not duplicated in the above groups but are used for separate AASCU and NASULGC calculations.) Eighteen late respondents are noted on the appendices, but were not included in the calculations of overall averages.

To facilitate accurate longitudinal comparisons and calculations of percentage changes, averages for each data item were calculated separately, using only those institutions reporting 1984 and 1985 figures for that category. Room and board averages were calculated only for those institutions offering both room and board. Averages for these categories were calculated first for the overall sample and then for AASCU and NASULGC members. The sample size for each calculation is listed below.

	Overall	AASCU	NASULGC

State and first professional averages were calculated by combining all respondent data from both groups of association members.

Notes on Contents of Appendices

There are two sets of appendices that follow this report. One contains undergraduate and graduate tuition and fees with separate listings for AASCU and NASULGC member institutions. One other set contains combined listings for the two associations; for room and board charges and for first professional charges. Each set of appendices is preceded by a break page that contains guidelines for interpreting the information.

NOTES ON ALL APPENDICES

These appendices contain data for all 1985 respondents. Appendices A and B contain typical full-year tuition and fee charges for undergraduates and graduates at AASCU member institutions. Appendices C and D consist of similar information for NASULGC member institutions. In the appendices for graduate charges, only those institutions reporting graduate charges are listed.

Asterisks in Appendices A-F note some special categories of institutions:

* Late arriving surveys. These were added to the appendices, but were not used in the calculations of averages.

 AASCU-type institutions that are not presently members of the Association.

 Unique type of institution whose charges are not typical of other state colleges and universities in that state.

NOTES ON APPENDICES E AND F

Appendix E lists 1985 room and board charges,as well as the room and board option code, for all AASCU and NASULGC respondents. Since room and board plans vary so much, these charges represent the typical charge for the students living and eating on campus. Excluded from this list are those institutions with neither room nor board alternatives (option code 5). The code describing the room and board options consists of 5 numbers. The values of these follow, along with the letter equivalent used by NASULGC to categorize institutions in previous student charges surveys.

1=B=Room and Board are separate fees.

2=A=Room and Board is one combined fee.

3=C=Room only offered.

4=Board only offered. (An AASCU option only.)

5=J=Room and Board are not available.

Appendix F lists first professional charges for 1985 for resident and nonresident students at responding AASCU and NASULGC institutions.
